1.The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-11, 13, 14, 21 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over European Patent Application 457,607 in view of British Patent Application 2,326,727 for reasons of record.

2.Claims 15-20 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over European Patent Application 457,607 in view of British Patent Application 2,326,727 and Sharp et al -240 for reasons of record.

3.Applicant's arguments filed February 14, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant submits that since British -727 is directed to making a cell wall that one of ordinary skill in the art would not have utilized general liquid crystal fabrication and alignment techniques set forth therein in the film making process of European -607. Such is simply not persuasive. One of ordinary skill in the liquid crystal art would know of various ways to orient liquid crystal films in making polarization rotators and whether such is described in relation to a film or a cell wall would have been of no patentable consequence. The fact that the primary reference suggests that the film be used in conjunction with a polarizer is prime facie evidence that the combination is valid, in that the secondary reference constructs the cell wall accordingly. It is notoriously well known to roll up films for storage and unwinding them from such a roll would of course be a necessity should these films need to be used at a later time.

While it is understood that the instant invention centers around making a film that can be wound/unwound, applicant must realize that such technology—ie, winding and unwinding of films-- has been around for years and cannot be a basis for patentability. Also, the fact that British –727 is directed to making a cell wall type LCD structure does not obviate the employment of a particular step taught therein in the process of the primary reference.

4.THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
